A Princesa de Gales, Catherine, retoma seus compromissos após o término do tratamento de quimioterapia

The Princess of Wales, Catherine, congratulated for completing her chemotherapy treatment, resumed her activities today.

Kate, 42 years old, wife of the British heir to the throne, Prince William, resumed her work hosting a reunion at Windsor Castle yesterday afternoon.

"The Princess of Wales, Patroness of the Royal Foundation of the Prince and Princess of Wales, received a Reunion on the Development of Early Childhood at Windsor Castle yesterday afternoon", according to a post on the Court Circular, which documents the events held by the royal family public or behind the palace walls.

Kate gave an update on her health last week, confirming that she was "doing what I can to be cancer-free" and starting a "new phase of recovery with a new sense of hope and appreciation for life."

In a personal message, she shows the family enjoying the English summer together, the princess said that the last nine months were challenging, but that "I am, nevertheless, anxious to return to work and perform some public appearances in the coming months when I can."

No additional details of the reunion were recorded in the Court Circular, but Kate has been focused on the development of early childhood for years, which her advisors previously described as her "life's work."
