Labour se dirige hacia los activistas para que realicen campañas en los distritos electorales con poblaciones musulmanas significativas

El Partido Laborista está instando a los activistas a que realicen campañas en distritos electorales con poblaciones musulmanas significativas, debido a los temores de que algunos votantes hayan sido alienados por la postura del partido sobre Gaza.

Sus esfuerzos de campaña se están concentrando principalmente en los escaños del Partido Conservador y del SNP en un intento de asegurar una potencial mayoría récord. Sin embargo, hay 13 escaños del Partido Laborista donde los musulmanes representan al menos una quinta parte del electorado, y el partido está instando a sus activistas a que se centren en ellos.

La victoria de George Galloway en las recientes elecciones parciales de Rochdale y la caída del voto laborista en áreas musulmanas en las elecciones locales de mayo han suscitado preocupaciones dentro del partido de que algunos votantes musulmanes están abandonando al Laborismo por su postura sobre Gaza y su reticencia inicial a exigir un alto el fuego total, en particular, los comentarios del líder Sir Keir Starmer en octubre de 2024 en una entrevista en LBC, en los que afirmó que Israel "tiene derecho" a retener el suministro de agua y electricidad a Gaza.

Posteriormente, Starmer aclaró que cree que Israel tiene "derecho a la defensa propia" pero no debe retener la ayuda humanitaria.

El sitio web del Partido Laborista invita a los activistas potenciales a que introduzcan su código postal y, a continuación, sugiere hasta tres escaños objetivo para que realicen campaña, a veces escaños situados a decenas de millas de distancia.

De los 28 escaños de Inglaterra donde los musulmanes representan al menos una quinta parte del electorado -todos ganados por el Partido Laborista en las elecciones generales de 2024, incluido Rochdale- el sitio web insta a los voluntarios a que realicen campaña en 13 de ellos, incluido tres de los cuatro escaños de Birmingham de la lista, ambos escaños de Luton y ambos escaños de Bradford.

Sin embargo, el sitio web del Partido Laborista solo insta a los voluntarios a que realicen campaña en uno de los 11 escaños de Londres con poblaciones musulmanas significativas - Bethnal Green y Stepney, el escaño sucesor de Bethnal Green y Bow, que Galloway ganó al Laborismo en 2005 en el contexto de la guerra de Irak.

A pesar de los temores aparentes del partido de que los votantes musulmanes seguirán apoyándoles, la semana pasada una encuesta de Savanta para el medio digital de noticias musulmanas Hyphen encontró que el 63% de los votantes musulmanes tienen la intención de votar al Partido Laborista, lo que Hyphen describió como "relativamente sin cambios" desde el otoño pasado.

La encuesta de Savanta encontró que los tres problemas más importantes para los votantes musulmanes en esta elección son el NHS, el coste de la vida y la economía. El 20% de los musulmanes encuestados clasificaron el conflicto de Gaza como su principal preocupación, con el 44% clasificándolo entre sus cinco principales preocupaciones. Los equivalentes entre todos los votantes británicos son el 3% y el 12%.

Sunder Katwala, director del think tank British Future, dijo al Observer: "Creo que tiene sentido para [el Partido Laborista] que se preocupe, y que se vea preocupado, y que ponga energía en ello. En toda la sociedad británica, este es el grupo demográfico en el que es más probable que el Partido Laborista pierda apoyos, no los gane.

"La evidencia en las elecciones locales fue de un impacto sorprendentemente grande. Y la evidencia en las encuestas nacionales es de un impacto sorprendentemente pequeño. Y eso podría deberse a que los votantes están pensando estr ``less atégicamente sobre el uso de diferentes elecciones."

Según la encuesta de Savanta, el 86% de los votantes musulmanes que clasifican el conflicto de Gaza como una de sus principales preocupaciones considerarían votar a un candidato independiente pro-palestino que se presente sobre ese tema. Una organización llamada The Muslim Vote ha respaldado una lista de candidatos alternativos a los dos principales partidos en una serie de escaños con grandes comunidades musulmanas, en función de su apoyo a un alto el fuego en Gaza, un estado palestino, sanciones a Israel, acciones contra la islamofobia y financiación para abordar las desigualdades.

Katwala dijo que el Partido Laborista intentará convencer a los votantes musulmanes tanto con su mensaje general de cambio y oferta política general, como con su política específica del manifiesto de reconocer un estado palestino como parte de una solución de dos estados.

"El Partido Laborista está perdiendo votos entre los musulmanes y no entre ningún otro grupo, pero es probablemente más popular entre los musulmanes que entre cualquier otra sección del electorado", dijo. "Creo que el grupo de estudiantes activos musulmanes está abandonando al Laborismo, y sus madres y padres y abuelos probablemente siguen apoyando más al Laborismo."

El Partido Laborista ha sido contactado para obtener comentarios.
