What suit is the highest in poker?

No suit is "higher" or better than any other suit in most poker games, including Texas Hold'em.

That said, some other poker games do rank suits. The most common ranking of suits goes in the following order (from best to worst): spades, hearts, diamonds, clubs.

What is a straight / flush / full house in poker?

A straight is five cards in a row. For example, 9 8 7 6 5 is a straight.

A flush is five cards of the same suit. For example, K J 8 6 4 is a flush.

A full house is when you hold both three-of-a-kind and a pair. For example, A A A 7 7 is a full house.

When it's a flush vs straight, who wins?

A flush wins versus a straight.

Flushes consist of 5 cards of the same suit, such as A J 9 7 4. Straights consist of 5 cards in a row, such as 7 6 5 4 3.

Why does a flush beat a straight? Because you have a lower probability of hitting a flush than a straight.

When it's 3 of a kind vs a straight, who wins?

A straight wins versus 3 of a kind.

3 of a kind only beats two pair, one pair, and high card hands.

What if two people have two pair?

When multiple players have two pair, the player with the better high pair wins the pot. For example, aces and twos would beat kings and queens.

If multiple players have the same highest pair, the player with the better low pair wins the pot. For example, aces and sevens would beat aces and twos.

If multiple players have the exact same two pair, the player with the better kicker wins the pot.
