"Tienes que preguntarle a los israelíes", dice el general de brigada de la Guardia Revolucionaria de Irán, Ali Belali, con una sonrisa cuando se le pregunta cuántos misiles balísticos disparó Irán hacia Israel en su ataque del 14 de abril.

Pero está más que dispuesto a mostrar los misiles y drones que Irán utilizó en su primer ataque directo contra Israel lanzado directamente desde suelo iraní.

"Fue una medida punitiva", dice Belali, mientras BR un puntero láser para indicar los misiles desplegados, que se alzan sobre él en el expositor.

Dos semanas después de que Oriente Medio estuvo al borde de una guerra total, con Irán disparando cientos de proyectiles hacia Israel en represalia por un presunto ataque aéreo israelí contra un complejo de embajada iraní en Damasco, Teherán está ansioso por mostrar al mundo que es capaz de enfrentar un conflicto más amplio si se lo presentan.

El 19 de abril, Israel respondió con un ataque presunto dentro de las fronteras de Irán. Tanto las acciones iraníes como israelíes resultaron en daños mínimos y, según parece, estaban destinadas a restaurar el deterioro. La situación se desactivó, pero la amenaza de guerra sigue siendo grande sobre la región mientras continúa la ofensiva israelí en Gaza.

corinthians e vaidebet obtuvo un acceso raro a un expositor de la Guardia Revolucionaria iraní que muestra las capacidades aeroespaciales de Teherán, incluidos los tipos de armas que se utilizaron contra Israel el mes pasado. Los medios estadounidenses nunca habían sido permitidos antes.

En el expositor permanente de las fuerzas aeroespaciales de la Guardia Revolucionaria en el oeste de Teherán, decenas de misiles balísticos de largo y medio alcance se alzan junto con misiles de crucero y drones. El expositor tiene como objetivo mostrar el desarrollo y el progreso del programa de drones y misiles iraníes.

"Hoy, nuestros drones y misiles se han convertido en un factor importante de fuerza y ejecución de poder en el mundo", dice Belali, él mismo un excomandante de misiles durante la guerra Irán-Irak de ocho años que terminó en 1988. Dice que el masivo barrido de drones y misiles iraníes contra Israel fue un gran éxito.

El ataque de Irán a Israel incluyó drones, misiles balísticos y de crucero. El cielo nocturno sobre las ciudades israelíes se iluminó a medida que los sistemas de defensa aérea de Israel trabajaban para interceptar los proyectiles. Mientras tanto, las fuerzas aéreas de Israel, Estados Unidos, el Reino Unido, Francia y Jordania estabanactivas en los cielos, también tratando de derribar tanto como pudieran drones e misiles iraníes.

"NATO, EE. UU. y los países árabes de la región querían crear barreras para nuestros drones, misiles y misiles de crucero, pero fracasaron", dice Belali. "El mundo no pudo detenernos." El ejército israelí dijo que el "99%" de los proyectiles disparados por Irán fueron interceptados por Israel y sus socios, con solo una "pequeña cantidad" de misiles balísticos que alcanzaron el país. Los iraníes afirman que lograron
