Em meio a uma fraqueza econômica e crescente concorrência, a Nuvei reduziu sua orientação de receita 2024 para US$ 195 milhões em comparação aos US$ 199 milhões anteriores no ponto médio. A revisão na orientação veio porque a Nuvei perdeu um dos seus grandes clientes - e a aquisição de novos negócios foi devagar.

Métricas de avaliação mostram que a Nuvei Corporation pode ser razoavelmente valorizada. A pontuação de Valor C indica que seria uma escolha neutra para os investidores de valor. As perspectivas de saúde financeira e crescimento da Nuvei demonstram seu potencial se realizar em uma linha com o mercado. Atualmente, a Nuvei tem evoluído.

The historic agreement of power sharing between the Scottish National Party and the Scottish Greens will end after a crisis over the climate strategy of Scotland.

The Bute House agreement was signed on August 2024 by the then SNP leader Nicola Sturgeon and the co-leader of the Scottish Greens Patrick Harvie.

The successor to Sturgeon, Humza Yousaf, called a cabinet meeting on Monday of this week after the SNP backbenchers began to openly attack the agreement.

In a declaration furiously formulated, disclosed half an hour before the press conference of the Scottish Greens first minister, the co-leader Lorna Slater accused the SNP of "selling off future generations to calm the forces in the country" by withdrawing from the Bute House agreement.

Slater accused the SNP of betraying voters, and added that "by ending with an agreement so weak in a completely hopeless way", Humza Yousaf signaled for political cooperation: "it can no longer be trusted".

Appealing to the members of the SNP "who are worried about the climate, the rights of trans and independence", he asked them to consider "if they are in the party for their values or if the virtual football betting odds house should be with us while we intensify our defense of the planet in opposition".

She also expressed frustration over the fact that the members of the Scottish Green Party had been denied the chance to have a democratic word on the future of the convention.

The Scottish Greens should have held their own meeting at the end of May over whether they would end the agreement after the Scottish government's goal of reducing emissions by 75% by 2030.

The tensions between Yousaf and the Greens over various central issues of the Bute House agreement, including recognition of gender equality; construction of a railway; climate strategy - maritime politics - the unilateral decision to freeze taxes after the SNP's humiliating defeat in the Rutherglen and Hamilton West election.

Recent research suggests that the SNP faces the loss of dozens of seats in the next general election and Yousaf has been under increasing pressure within his party to end the agreement, aiming to neutralize attacks from the opposition.

A veteran Christine Grahame, SNP MSP, told ITV Borders on Wednesday that she believed the end of the negotiation.

"I think it's your course. I was here when we had a minority government and I think there's a divergence between what the Greens want, or rather: what the SNP want", she told News?

"I think the divergence is very large now and it doesn't interest any of the parties to continue. So, I would be happy if the SNP said: 'Let's work as a minority government'".
