The policy will only allow athletes who've transitioned before the age of 12.

A stance on transgender athletes made by one of the world's most important athletic federations has sent ripples throughout the rest of the sports world and some fear it may bring even wider changes to come.

The governing body of international competitive swimming announced a policy that will only allow athletes who've transitioned before the age of 12 to take part in any of the elite international swimming competitions.

The decision made by FINA pointed to what the organization says is a "performance gap" that emerges between biological males and females during puberty.

"Without eligibility standards based on biological sex or sex-linked traits, we are very unlikely to see biological females in finals, on podiums, or in championship positions," read the statement in part.

The policy also includes a proposal for a new open competition category, which athletes "would be able to compete without regard to their sex, their legal gender or their gender identity."

FINA cited coming to the decision after consulting with scientists and policy makers, but the policy still sent shockwaves throughout the world of swimming and beyond.

USA Wrestling and the International Rugby League have already followed suit and announced similar policies and other governing bodies are likely to follow suit.

FIFA, soccer's governing body, and World Athletics, the international governing body that covers track and field events, also announced a review of their transgender athlete policy.

Transgender athlete Schuyler Bailar said the FINA policy is "extreme."

"It's the most extreme policy that I've read to date.

I think it builds upon the discrimination that we're seeing specifically on trans people," said Bailar, who was the first openly transgender swimmer in NCAA Division 1 competition and the first trans man to compete in any NCAA Division 1 sport, to ABC News.

LGBTQ rights supporters gather at the Texas State Capitol to protest state Republican-led efforts to pass legislation that would restrict the participation of transgender student athletes on the first day of the 87th Legislature's 0 third special session on September 20, 2021 in Austin, Texas.

The decision could impact athletes like Lia Thomas, 0 whose record-breaking season in the women's swim category set off a firestorm of international controversy.

Thomas, who was recruited to the 0 University of Pennsylvania men's swim team and competed with them for three seasons, began transitioning in 2019 and joined the 0 women's team for the 2021 to 2022 season.

Earlier this year, Thomas made history as the first transgender athlete to win 0 a NCAA Division 1 National championship.

That season, she set Ivy league records and rose significantly in the women's rankings versus 0 her performance in the men's field.

In her only television interview, Thomas spoke to ABC News in May.

"Trans women competing in 0 women's sports does not threaten women's sports as a whole," said Thomas.

"Trans women are a very small minority of all 0 athletes and we haven't seen any massive wave of trans women dominating."

At the time, Thomas told ABC News that her 0 goal was to swim at the Olympic Trials.

But now, the new policy change prohibits Thomas from achieving those dreams.

In a 0 statement to ABC News, Thomas said, "The new FINA release is deeply upsetting. It is discriminatory and will only serve to 0 harm all women."

Former Southern Illinois University swimmer Natalie Fahey was one of 0 the first openly trans women to compete in the NCAA.

Unlike Thomas, Fahey didn't break any records and her races were 0 far less controversial.

"After I transitioned, I was solidly middle ground.

I didn't come in and break any records," said Fahey.

"I only 0 competed at a conference, but certainly just the fact that I'm not as good as Lia is, weighs into that."

Fahey 0 added that being able to swim as a woman was crucial to her.

Three-time Olympic Gold-medalist Nancy Hogshead-Makar is the founder 0 of Champion Women, a non-profit organization that advocates for gender equality in sports for women and girls.

She said she advocates 0 for the open competition category.

"Trans women are women, but there are a few places where biology really matters and women's 0 sports is one of them," she said.

But Bailar argues that the policy will have a lasting impact on trans youth 0 that expands beyond sports.

"Most people play sports for fun, to learn cooperation, to have a team, to have peer mentorship," 0 said Bailar.

"This [policy] polices all women because you have to know which girls are trans in order to exclude them.

And 0 when you do that, you enforce the policing of all women's bodies."

Franceses panaderos establecieron récord de baguette más larga del mundo

Las baguettes son un componente destacado de la escena culinaria de Francia. Ahora, los panaderos franceses han establecido el récord de la baguette más larga jamás creada.

Con 140,53 metros de largo (461 pies), supera el récord italiano anterior de 132,62 metros (435 pies y 1 pulgada), que se mantuvo durante casi cinco años, según Guinness World Records.

La larga hogaza se fabricó en público el domingo durante el Espectáculo de la Baguette de Suresnes en la Terraza del Fécheray en la comuna occidental suburbana de Suresnes, cerca de París.

Un juez de Guinness World Records (GWR) estuvo presente para aprobar el récord, según Reuters. Se ha contactado con GWR para obtener más comentarios.

Un equipo de 18 panaderos comenzó a preparar la masa a las 3 a.m. hora local antes de supervisar el proceso de horneado desde las 5 a.m., según un comunicado de prensa de Suresnes. Un horno móvil se diseñó especialmente para la ocasión.

Después de hornear el pan, se cortó una parte de la baguette, se untó con Nutella y se compartió con el público. Otra parte se entregó a la asociación juvenil Celije para que se distribuyera a los sin techo esa noche, según el comunicado de prensa.

"Suresnes está orgulloso de ser testigo de este récord para la baguette más larga del mundo, que celebra un símbolo nacional de nuestra gastronomía y los artesanos que perpetúan su sabiduría", dijo el alcalde de Suresnes, Guillaume Boudy, en el comunicado de prensa.

"Felicitó a los panaderos suresneses que participaron en la elaboración de la baguette y que mantienen las tradiciones de compartir, que son esenciales para la convivencia de nuestra ciudad", agregó Boudy.

Dominique Anract, presidente de la Confederación Nacional Francesa de Panadería y Pastelería, dijo en el comunicado de prensa que "requirió alrededor de 10 horas de trabajo". Agregó: "Un récord para la baguette más larga hecha a mano requiere un verdadero espíritu deportivo colectivo, y en este año de los Juegos Olímpicos, ¡enhorabuena a todos nuestros artesanos panaderos!".

La baguette, un largo, delgado y crujiente pan con cortes poco profundos, es una de las variedades de pan más populares del mundo.

Según las especificaciones oficiales del gobierno francés, las baguettes tradicionales francesas están hechas solo de harina blanca, agua, levadura y sal, tienen cinco cortes de hoja y miden aproximadamente 60 centímetros (23,6 pulgadas) de largo y 5 a 6 centímetros (2 a 2,4 pulgadas) de ancho.

Las baguettes francesas fueron galardonadas con un estatus especial en 2024. El "saber hacer artesanal y cultura de la baguette" fue oficialmente reconocido en la lista del Patrimonio Cultural Inmaterial de la UNESCO.

El intento de batir el récord de la baguette más larga del mundo tuvo como objetivo homenajear ese patrimonio cultural reconocido, según el comunicado de prensa de Suresnes.
